Consumed

William Berkhout

A candle's wick untouched by fire
Awaits the spark that it desires
And once it's lit you can't go back
For now a part is always black
Beneath, the wax begins to melt
A subtle sign of what's been dealt
While dripping slowly to its base
It won't be long now at this pace
Eating away at its pure core
Not recognizing what's in store
Now half of what it used to be
Trapped in its light it cannot see
The wax it once wore as a cloak
Will end it with a hiss and smoke.
